MAINE CENTRAL RAILROAD

Extension Bonds.

[First Mortgage

It is generally well known the Maine Central Railroad terminates at Danville Junction, and from thence to Portland the Road is a part of the Grand Trunk Railway. For the use of this piece of Road, (some 28 miles) the Maine Central pays to the Grand Trunk a rental, which, for some years past, has amounted to some $70 000 per annum. The Maine Central having leased the Portland & Kennebec R R and thus joined that entire Road with its own under one management, has decided to obviate the necessity of using the Grand Trunk road from Danville to Portland by building an Extension of its own road, from Danville Junction to CUMBERLAND, using the Portland and Kennebec R R from thence to Portland.

This Extension has already been surveyed and more than three fourths of the requisite grading and all the stone work and masonry completed, and the road will be ready for the iron, (already contracted for) in the Spring, and prepared for business soon afterward. To aid in accomplishing this work, the Maine Central Railroad has issued its Bonds to the amount of $500 000 payable in thirty years from October 1st, 1870.

These Bonds are secured by a First and only Mortgage upon the Extension and the Entire line of the Maine Central with all its property, (which would readily sell for three times the amount of its Bonded debt,) is holden for the payment of the Interest and Principal of these Bonds.

The security is

UNQUESTIONABLE.

A large part of this issue has already been taken in this and other States, and the remainder is offered for sale at a price which makes them one of the most desirable investments in the market.

The Bonds bear Interest at the rate of six per cent per annum and both

Principal and Interest payable IN GOLD.

Free from Government Tax.

Coupons Payable in Boston, April 1st and October 1st in each Year.

When it is considered that by building this Extension the Road can have a complete line of its own through to Portland at an outlay of some $30,000, (gold,) per year for interest, instead of paying some $70,000 per year rental to another corporation, the commendable economy of the undertaking will be apparent.

The local business alone, on the Extension will be profitable, besides the advantage to the Road of thus being connected by the same gauge with all the great Railroads of the Country.

Bonds issued in denominations of $500 and $1000 each.

The highest market price will be allowed for Government, State, and City Bonds, ... other Railroads and Corporations, and all marketable securities, in exchange for above.

PITCHING THE TENT TOWARDS SODOM

A Sermon preached in his own pulpit, Sunday evening Feb 26th by Rev F T Hazlewood, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Bangor

Text Gen 13 12 And Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom But the men of Sodom were wicked, and sinners before the Lord exceedingly

The passage of Scripture which I have read refers to the settlement in life of Lot the nephew of Abraham Associated with his uncle in the flight into Egypt, to escape famine, he was also his companion in the return to the Southern part of Palestine and finally to their original abode between Bethel and Ai, where Abraham had built an altar and called upon the name of the Lord. But Bethel, though before their flight into Egypt sufficient to hold them, was now too small to contain their possessions, so greatly had their sheep and goats and cattle increased. In consequence doubtless of the commingling of the flocks, and the jealousy and the rivalry of the herdmen, there soon came to be disagreement and strife among the servants of Abraham and of Lot. Hence a separation was deemed necessary. Standing upon one of the hills of Bethel they looked over the land in the direction of Sodom and Gomorrah and Zoar. Then Abraham, with characteristic generosity, exclaimed, "Let there be no strife I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen for we be brethren. Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself I pray thee, from me if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right, or if thou depart to the right hand then I will go to the left. And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, like the land of Egypt as thou comest unto Zoar. Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan. And Lot journeyed east, and they separated themselves the one from the other. Abraham dwelt in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain and pitched his tent towards Sodom. But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the Lord exceedingly.

It would be interesting indeed, to follow each of these men in his subsequent life and compare their experiences. But of this the object of the discourse will not allow. I wish on the contrary, to call call your attention to some of the results, which followed this settlement of Lot in Sodom, first, upon himself secondly, upon his family and thus discover the result of association with the evil to make application to some of the characteristics of popular life.

Of the direct result upon Lot of his association with the people of Sodom but little is said by the Scriptures, while much is to be inferred from them. The Apostle Peter referring to his experience as an illustration of God's watchful care of those who fear him while with swift punishment He visits the ungodly says. Turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, making them an example unto them that after should live ungodly and delivered just Lot vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked, for that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds. Here, then we have a man, whose tastes and habits of mind and early culture were continually shocked by his association with a people grossly immoral, sensual, devilish. Though he had no sympathy with the unrighteousness continually practiced before his eyes, yet he could not escape a sense of humiliation at the sight of manhood dethroned, of woman hood robbed of virtue. There was very little then, in the associations of this wicked city that could satisfy the mind, and heart of one who had been the companion of Abraham, the faithful, in the free and unsullied life of the tent. But though the apostle speaks of Lot as in a certain sense a preacher of righteousness yet it is doubtful if he wholly escaped for himself the contaminating influences of such society. Though vexed with their unlawful deeds, though ever remonstrating with them for their unrighteousness, he yet made the unmanly, unfatherly, inhuman proposition to sacrifice his two virgin daughters to the lust of the men, who clamored at his gate, in order that he might save from harm his mysterious, angel guests and still later coming forth from Sodom, he yielded to the seductions of wine pressed to his lips by these same daughters, and in his subsequent intoxication committed one of the most unnatural crimes. Such, then, the result upon Lot himself of pitching his tent towards Sodom. Vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked, he became himself more or less contaminated by association with them. For the most righteous man that ever lived, save Christ Jesus, has not found it possible with his imperfect nature, to subject himself to the sight and solicitation of evil, day by day, and escape unscathed. There is indeed a great depth of necessity lying back of the prayer which our Lord Himself taught us to pray "Lead us not into Temptation." There is a beautiful illustration of this in an incident which I ask your pardon for presenting, because it is so simple that it would seem the rather to belong to the children, than to be the possession of the maturer mind, and yet from it we all may learn more than one lesson.

From his home in the country, there once went to the city a young lad, whose only possessions, in addition to a character which had hitherto been without reproach, were his Bible, the memories of a christian father "passed into the skies," and the benediction of a widowed mother. He entered into the employ of a worldly minded man, who at once devised a method to test the boy's honesty. Placing in an obscure part of the store a bright silver coin, he waited for the result. In his daily duty, as, with broom in hand, he swept the store, the eye of the lad rested upon the coin, but he touched it not, for he believed it to have been laid there for a purpose, and remembered the commandment, which he had learned at his mother's knee "Thou shalt not steal." Yet as day after day he passed it, the desire for it took possession of him, and at last the remonstrances of conscience were quieted by such thoughts as these. It is a lost piece of silver, the owner does not care to seek for it; I might as well have it as any one. Thus listening to the voice of the tempter, he took it from its resting place and called it his. The proprietor of the store, who had not failed each day to look for it, missed it, charged the lad with the theft, listened to his confession of guilt, and prosecuted him for petty larceny. When the counsel for the lad made his defence, he began in a solemn manner, the recitation of the Lord's Prayer, and, closing with the words, "Lead us not into temptation," took his seat amid the profoundest silence. The effect upon the audience, who had learned of the method used by this hard-hearted man to break the boy's honesty, rather than to develope it, was marked indeed. But upon not one of that large gathering, ... the courtroom, was the effect so marked as upon the man himself, who, whispering for a moment in the ear of the counsel, withdrew ... the prosecution, left the courtroom, ... with the conviction that ... [illegible] tion finds affinity in desires, which are not wrong in themselves, whose misdirection and perversion only are sin.

But I hasten from Lot, briefly to consider the result of the settlement in Sodom upon his family. At the time that the Lord destroyed the city, the family of Lot consisted of his wife, two unmarried daughters, and several daughters, who had found husbands among the men of Sodom. When the angels, then, warned Lot of the approaching doom of the city, they urged him to bring his family out of the place speedily, and Lot went and spoke unto his sons in law, who had married his daughters, and said 'Up, get you out of this place, for the Lord will destroy this city.' But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons in law, and, when the morning arose, the angels hastened Lot, saying "Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters which are here, lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city." And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters, and they brought him forth, and set him without the city. All the family of Lot then, save these three had become so wedded to the frivolities and sins of the city, that no argument or warning could avail to induce them to forsake them and they perished in the iniquity of the city. But what of the wife and the two daughters who came forth with him? The wife looked back, and became a pillar of salt. That is doubtless she came forth from the city with reluctance, and lingered on the way, desiring to return because to her the life of the city was agreeable, and while she lingered was overtaken by the storm, and suffocated by the sulphurous smoke, or killed by the lightning. Falling thus in the way, her body would soon become in that region incrusted with salt fully justifying the language of Scripture when it says, 'She became a pillar of salt.' But what of the two daughters who remained? The inspired record says that Lot went up out of Zoar and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him for he feared to dwell in Zoar, and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters. There these two daughters, so contaminated by the life of the city whence they had fled, first made their father drunk with wine and then committed with him the crime of incest. From this unholy drunken alliance sprang the idolatrous children of Moab and of Ammon the worshippers of false gods, the continual thorn in the flesh of Israel, the people from whom doubtless Israel suffered more than from any other in all the vicissitudes of their weary life. Such, then, the result of the choice of Lot, as he stood upon one of the hills of Bethel, and made selection of the well watered region to the East and South. Such the result upon Lot and his family, when, deceived by mere worldly advantage, he pitched his tent towards Sodom, whose inhabitants were wicked and sinners before the Lord exceedingly. Behold, then, the former companion of Abraham stripped of all earthly possessions bereft of wife and children save two and himself in these two in his impoverishment and old age no refining and elevating influence to lift him heavenward, but the rather every thing to drag him earthward and discover what a changed complexion to his entire life that one act gave! For who doubts that the result would have been different, if, with his knowledge of the condition of society in Sodom, Lot, afraid to rear his family there had sacrificed the worldly advantages offered, and pushed forth into more healthful moral associations. It is not the only time that a man has sacrificed his family for earthly interest. For though it is true that it is not uncommon thing for a man, in seeking a home for his family to be particular concerning the neighborhood, and the probable associates of his children, yet how many ignore the possibility of pitching the tent towards Sodom or of familiarizing the minds of the members of the family with the life of Sodom even though the local habitation be regarded morally irreproachable. For there is such a thing as association of ideas as vicinity of habits as neighborhood of customs as dwelling. Hence, a man may pitch his tent toward Sodom or dwell in nearness to Sodom because of identity with practices habits or customs, which largely prevail in such a sink of iniquity —habits and customs which in themselves absolutely considered, may not be evil but which uniformly are made the occasion of evil. For it it is true that by representation in word or imagery, or painting or cunning device life abroad may be realized in our own home so that dwelling amid the rigors of a Northern climate we may yet experience the delicious sensations of tropical warmth and ease and luxuriance so it is none the less true that by similarity of habits and customs that life whose only experiences are found in the sinks of iniquity may be brought very near to homes most refined and socially most exalted.

For what difference is there between wine bibbing in the palace and wine bibbing in the tippling house and what difference in nature of result between the living tableaux of dissoluteness in dens of infamy and the pictures more suggestive more effectually awakening and degrading the imagination which in word or in picture characterize much of the literature which hangs in the window of the news dealer or finds its way to homes apparently so jealously guarded from contact with vice. For certainly, if by the literature and imagery and customs of London, we may live in London, though thousands of miles away so by the literature and tableaux and habits of dissolute society, we may live in that society, though great and apparently insurmountable barriers separate the two points from the Fifth Avenue, and North Street from Beacon street and the crazy crumbling shanty from the freestone front.

Let me, then, briefly, yet honestly and plainly speak of some of those habits dwelling near to which a man may morally compromise himself and his family. For by reference to these habits the position, which has been taken with reference to the result of association with the evil, will, I think, be more clearly defined and also strengthened — These habits are Sabbath breaking, drinking dancing card playing, and gambling. Be not startled, I pray you, by this announcement, for I am not speaking of Sodom, but of the vicinity to Sodom. I am not dwelling upon the corruptions of the city, but upon the well trodden avenues which lead to them. For all these habits, save gambling, there may be offered a certain kind of excuse, which will to some extent give to it the semblance of right, and even gambling may be so conducted, as recently in this city, as to deceive some even of the professedly elect.— But this I think my language hereafter will justify. By pitching the tent towards Sodom then, I mean for a man to subject himself, and those dependent upon him, to influences which cannot but be hurtful, even destructive of moral life.

The Sabbath breaker pitches his tent towards Sodom, because Sabbath breaking is one of the most effectual means of escaping all religious culture, which educates conscience to a knowledge of duty, and to the assurance of a way of salvation upon the consciousness of imperfection in duty. Largely by the providence of God, in no small measure, by the custom of men, we have crowded into the one day of rest, almost all the religious instruction of the week. Hence Sunday brings to the most of men the only reinforcement of their knowledge of moral law, and of the Gospel of the grace of God. Especially is this true of those who make no profession of religion. I know that religious culture should be given in the home, but it is not. I know that men ought daily to commune with the deep things of God, as revealed in the Bible, but they do not. You know, as well as I know, that if we should go through this community to-day, and inquire how many have made the study of the Bible, and religious meditation a duty, the number would be small indeed. Upon the ministrations of the Sabbath, then, we are largely dependent for the knowledge, and culture, and growth of grace, and reinforcement of moral decision, so needful for the great duties and conflicts of life. Hence the importance which we should attach to it. For if God, in His providence, has made this the day for acquaintance with law and Gospel, with duty and salvation, then anything and everything which has a tendency to divert the attention from this object, and its great importance, and its inestimable results is to be regretted. Hence, I say, though in the act itself, in the sight of God, there may be no sin, when a man gives the whole of the Sabbath, or a part of it, to physical rest, yet he is dwelling in such vicinity to a principle so easily perverted, and misused, as to render the more contamination of himself and of his family ... [illegible]

ungodly men can appreciate and which will prevent their reproaches of the christian life, is indeed pitching the tent toward Sodom.— For, if a man believing that every day should be kept alike holy to God, exercises what he holds to be his inalienable right, and sleeps walks abroad on the day, when Christendom assembles for special religious service, he takes a liberty, which human experience with unvarying testimony asserts, while it may not be, yet probably will be abused. Still further, though a man by such concession may not injure himself yet the educational influence upon others is pernicious. For a man cannot ignore the institutions of the Christian Sabbath, and expect his family or his associates in life to respect them. Hence the father whose seat in the house of God is vacant will soon find that the seat of his son or daughter is likewise vacant, and himself spending the day at home in reading or idleness find it difficult to convince his son that it is not just as right for him to spend the day in the same manner in the office or in the club room. The parent who drives his horse on the Sabbath even though to his own conscience justified by the motive of health or respect for the dead in the cemetery cannot morally restrain his son from driving the same horse, on the same day for pleasure. For the motives ... In other words the man who allows himself to escape the institutions of the christian Sabbath even though for the time being circumstances might seem to justify him in so doing, is pitching his tent in the vicinity of a habit which may yet obtain the mastery over him and bring to ruin those he loves best. Thus I think it is first becoming one of the greatest evils of the day that the children have so much encouragement from their elders to look upon personal ease as all important and upon the ordinances of the Sabbath as secondary. For thus they grow up with little knowledge of those principles of right and of that divine plan of salvation so necessary for a proper appreciation and consummation of life's great duty. I say then that when the ... not be a Sabbath breaker ... [illegible]

But I mentioned drinking as another ... [illegible] ... And surely to Sodom belong the bachs where this fiery fluid is furnished to man for a beverage.

But aside from this, even though the man himself dwell in security without contamination, in the vicinity of Sodom there is yet more than a probability that this neighborhood to the evil will prove detrimental to his offspring. For it is a fact disclosed by psychological research that appetite in the parent is often intensified in the child. The iniquity of the fathers is visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.— For taste and habit are not always acquired but largely received from ancestry. This of son men have wondered why their children should have such an inordinate thirst for alcoholic liquors even though they knew all the while that they themselves for years had secretly though moderately indulged in their use. Hence I say that the man who putting a restraint upon his thirst for strong drinks indulges only in an occasional draught of the lighter wines, is, so far as the possibilities and hopes of his offspring are concerned pitching his tent towards Sodom. He may himself live and die without the drunkard's reproach, but not so his children.

But I have yet to mention other habits as illustrations of the result of dwelling in the vicinity of the evil. Hence, I hasten to speak of dancing and card playing. You will notice please, friends, I do not speak of these as in themselves necessarily wrong. I cannot see any more sin in modest dancing than in modest walking, or running I know that there may be immodest walking and running as well as immodest dancing. But for all that I still believe that dancing leads more naturally to immodesty than either walking, or running. Hence, I appeal fearlessly to the history of it in the experience of every community. Has it not, for the most part, from a modest posture and movement descended to the immodesty of the round dances and waltzes and can-can of French brothers, and German beer gardens, I know that there are exceptions. I know that it is possible for one to dance gracefully and modestly. You will not do me the injustice of understanding me to say that the act is wrong in itself. But this I do say, that there is something in it, I know not what, that brings it, in this world of passion and temptation into the neighborhood of Sodom. For you will see at once that if the sexes were restricted in dancing the fascination and inspiration of it would be gone. For that familiarity which would be regarded as an insult, in any other movement of life, is the charm of it all. I know that to some of the young misses present it seems strange that father and mother should object to their learning to dance. For they can see no harm in it. Nor can father and mother, when they look upon the happy throng of children in the home. But they know that if you learn to dance, it will not stop with the home, and the innocence of childhood. By and by, and when you are older, some one will ask you to the ball, and once in the ball-room, you must do as the dancers do, or they will make it too uncomfortable for you to be there. But how many are there of sufficient moral courage to stand alone against custom?—And yet, if you hold your friend to be high-minded, and worthy of your esteem, and of the keeping of your earthly happiness, ever jealous of your honor, would you not expect his blood to tingle with indignation, to see you folded in the embrace of a stranger in the giddy whirl of the waltz? The learning to dance, then, is the acquiring of an accomplishment, which brings one into the neighborhood of the evil. I ask you, then, is it prudent to acquire a taste, or habit, which may sometime in you ... [illegible]

Lot's inalienable right to pitch his tent towards Sodom but would it not have been a part of wisdom knowing as he must have known the wickedness of the people and the moral certainty of contaminating his family by association with them to seek a home elsewhere? Thus though no man may say that in the mere act of dancing you commit sin yet I ask you is it wise when there are so many other harmless sources of amusement and recreation give to yourself to that whose almost inevitable tendency ... is detrimental to morals?

The objection to card playing ... that you know what I mean ... similar to that which has been urged against dancing. I do not think that any man though possessor of the greatest power of analysis and the broadest experience and the largest knowledge of the Bible can show that it ... [illegible]

... Hence he who indulges in it is surely pitching his tent towards Sodom. For the man of gambling, who can resist it and escape its results, if once it takes sure hold upon him. Let the thousands of men speak, who trifling with it have drunk the dregs of the cup which it presses to the lips of the broken hearted wives and impoverished children testify.

Thus all too briefly and imperfectly I know I have alluded to some of the habits the least association of ours with which will bring us into contact with the evil and its possibility of contamination by it. Sabbath breaking, moderate drinking dancing card playing gambling where do they flourish most, if not in the Sodoms of the land? By what surer ties of affinity can the young fit themselves for companionship with the inhabitants of these Sodoms than by Sabbath breaking moderate drinking dancing card playing gambling? True, is it not, that the man who pursues such courses pitches his tent towards Sodom? Certain is it not that as Lot subjected himself and those dependent upon him to the temptations and corruptions of the wicked citizens of Sodom so these devotees of the habit I have mentioned subject themselves and those dependent upon their example and influence to the great train of evils so difficult of dissociation from them.

My friends, though I have spoken freely of some of the evils to which I think the youth of this age are especially exposed you know me too well to think that I would rob childhood or youth, or old age of the means of relaxation and recreation. God knows that in this world of care and far reaching responsibilities, and grave issues, we need diversion. But I submit to you, is it wise for us to resort to those means of enjoyment, which, though perhaps in themselves, separated from the occasion, and irrespective of object, morally harmless, are yet, for the most part the conference avenues to immorality? Are there not many occasions for relaxation and amusement, the improvement of which will not send the child forth from his father's house, with points of appliance, touching which designing men may work their ruin? In other words is it wise for mere worldly advantage to familiarize the minds of the youth with the evil, to predispose them to the wrong, to lead them to the paths which take hold on death? It is related of a ... [illegible]

...ed by a yawning chasm, that he once sought a skilful driver for his carriage. To the several applicants for the position he said in turn "And how near to the brink of the precipice can you drive, without plunging over?" One said "within a foot sir," another, "within six inches sir," another "within three inches sir," and still another "within one inch, sir," and suiting action to the word, he drove so near to the edge of the cliff, that his preservation seemed a miracle indeed. There was but one man left. But no one thought it possible for him to compete with his predecessor for the position. But the gentleman turned to him and said "and now sir, how near can you drive with safety?" His reply was "It is my ambition sir, not to see how near I can come to destruction but the rather how far I can keep away from it." "Then sir," was the answer, "you are just the man I need." And to the chagrin of the others the place was given to him. This is it not the part of wisdom not to see how near we can pitch our tent towards Sodom without contamination but the rather how far we can put Sodom [illegible] the distance?"

[illegible] the length of present session still a matter of doubt [illegible] will be made to obtain an [illegible] present pressing business [illegible] despatched A long session is not [illegible] but there are several matters that [should] be attended to at once among them the concurrence of the Senate in the House [resolution] repealing the duty on coal and other important matters unfinished at the last session which can be acted upon without delay. A despatch announces that the House on Saturday passed a joint resolution to adjourn on Wednesday next, and it will depend upon the disposition of the President and the Senate whether the present session will be farther prolonged.

The Boston Journal says "Speaker Blaine has fully met the expectations of his friends and has satisfied his opponents as well as could be expected. He has been prompt, accurate and well sustained in his rulings, and impartial in his appointments. He has now before him a task of great difficulty in constructing the more important committees of the House but it is generally agreed that he enters upon it with his hands untied by any committals or pledges while his familiarity with the merits of the old members must give him much greater advantages than he had for undertaking the same work two years ago.

In the testimony of Superintendent Toucey of the Hudson River R R, relative to the New Hamburg disaster, he said that the engineer should have put on the patent brakes before sounding the whistle instead of waiting that he did not think the fireman made proper effort to put on the patent brakes, and that the train ought to have been stopped with the means at hand and the notice given He also stated that passenger car axles were used only three years, and the wheels tested often on every trip, but that axles were run on freight trains without regard to time, and that the wheels of such were not tested between New York and Albany If the wheels of the oil train had been tested the defect might have been discovered.

The Kennebec Reporter exposes the typographical error of a contemporary in printing "rip" in place of "trip," and proves the universal liability to such accidents by spelling the name of the paper referred to: "Chrowicle."

In the night session of the Senate, at two a. m., after an earnest appeal from Mr. Hamlin, the item of $42,333 for completing the construction of the Custom House at Portland, which the Committee on Appropriations had stricken from the Omnibus bill, was restored.

Prince [illegible] and several others of the Japanese delegation returned to New York [illegible] and sailed Saturday for Europe.

THE CLOSING HOURS OF THE SESSION.

Both Houses of the 41st Congress remained in continuous session throughout Friday night with an occasional recess to dispose of the appropriation bills conference reports and other unfinished business. In the Senate the civil appropriation bill was passed at 2 15 a m Mr Trumbull then called up the House joint resolution repealing the duty on coal, which was followed by all sorts of motions to consume time, the debate lasting until [illegible] a. m when an executive session was held and a recess taken until 10 30 a. m On reassembling the coal repeal was again brought up, and vigorously opposed by Vickers (Dem of Md, and Scott of Pa. Mr Trumbull said the country should know that the Democrats who were so clamorous for tariff reduction were trying to kill the bill by dilatory motions, Scott retorting that Trumbull was trying to depart from the party platform and assail a great industrial interest. Mr Trumbull scouted the assertion, as this bill had been passed by a House two-thirds Republican Mr Bayard rose to a question of privilege and offered a resolution tendering the thanks of the Senate to Hon Schuyler Colfax, Vice President, which was adopted without objection The discussion of the coal repeal was resumed, but shortly interrupted by a report from the committee appointed, that they had waited upon the President and he had no further communication to make The hour of 12 having arrived Vice President Colfax addressed the Senate as follows

Thanking the Senators for their approval of my official course, which you have placed upon your records I declare the third session of the Senate of the United States of the 41st Congress adjourned without day

The all night session of the House continued till 5 30 a m with a recess till 10 a m and subsequently till 11 a. m Considerable excitement was produced by a proposition by Mr Garfield to amend the rules of the House so as to provide that after a previous question is moved no motion shall be entertained except to adjourn, to fix the time to which to adjourn and to lay on the table, such motions not to be repeated, and that after the previous question is seconded no original motion whatever shall be entertained except the single motion to adjourn Messrs Eldridge Brooks of N Y Randall and other Democrats denounced the proposition in unmeasured terms, amidst the greatest confusion, Mr Brooks vowing that the Democrats would resist it even at the hazard of a revolution Mr Van Wyck of N Y declared that the 42d Congress could adopt its own rules and that the present Congress had found the existing rules necessary to secure honest legislation — Finally amid much uproar, the motion was negatived failing, a two-thirds vote Another scene occurred when Mr Clarke of Kansas attempted to get up a land grant bill which McNeely of Ill and Randall of Pa denounced as a job This was resented by Clarke and the altercation went so far that the disputants shook their fists at each other in rage The bill got only two affirmative votes At 4 30 a m the Omnibus bill came from the Senate with an enormous batch of amendments Mr Dawes stated that although there were many which he could not approve he thought it best to concur in the amendments, as a further conference would be hopeless Others favored this view and the House then concurred At 11 a m the House reassembled the members looking weary after their vigils and indisposed for much serious work Unanimous consent being asked for various propositions Randall of Pa. gave notice that he should object to everything, and business was brought to a stand still The bill abolishing the grades of admiral and Vice Admiral in the Navy was carried by tellers but defeated by a call from the minority for the yeas and nays it being within five minutes of adjournment During the call Mr Garfield from the committee announced that the President had no further communication to make The call of the roll was resumed but the hour of noon arriving, it was interrupted by the fall of the Speaker's gavel The sudden clamor of the House was hushed into perfect stillness when the Speaker addressing the House said —

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives—Our labors are at an end, but I delay the final adjournment long enough to return my most profound and respectful thanks for the commendation which you have been pleased to bestow upon my official course and conduct In a deliberative body of this character the presiding officer is fortunate if he retains the confidence and steady support of his political associates. Beyond that you give me the assurance that I have earned the respect and good will of those from whom I am separated by party lines Your expressions are most grateful to me and are most gratefully acknowledged The Congress whose existence closes with this hour enjoys a memorable distinction It is the first in which all of the States have been represented on this floor since the baleful winter that preceded our late bloody war Ten years have passed since then—years of trials and triumphs years of wild destruction and years of careful rebuilding—and after all and as a result of all, the National Government is here to-day united strong proud defiant and just with territorial area vastly expanded and with three additional States represented on the folds of its flag For these prosperous fruits of our great struggle let us humbly give thanks to the God of battles and to the Prince of Peace. And now, gentlemen, with one more expression of the obligation I feel for the considerate kindness with which you have always sustained me I perform the only remaining duty of my office in declaring, as I now do, that the House of Representatives of the 41st Congress is adjourned sine die.

The President on Saturday morning, with his Cabinet and Secretary, occupied his room in the Capitol where he approved and signed sixty seven bills, including the remaining general appropriation bills The following nine bills were not signed

For the relief of purchasers of lands sold for direct tax in insurrectionary States in relation to the Selma Rome and Dalton Railroad Company, Alabama relating to telegraphic communication between the United States and foreign countries, a joint resolution relating to the rights of actual settlers upon certain lands, and acts for the relief of Anna M Howard, Joseph Ormsby, George Wright, Mary Clark, widow of Leonard Clark and granting a pension to Adam Correll

Several hundred bills which passed one House or the other, failed to receive concurrent action Among the House bills which failed to receive the concurrence of the Senate, were the following

To revise, consolidate and amend the statutes relating to the P O Department, to aid in the execution of the law of the Utah anti polygamy bill, to extend the time for the presentation of claims for bounty under the act of July 28, 1866, the joint resolution in relation to the contest between the people of Cuba and the government of Spain; the act to authorize the President to accept the resignation of Judges of the U S Courts; for a better security of the Agricultural College funds, the act for the protection of settlers on public lands, to enable honorably discharged soldiers and sailors and their widows and orphans to acquire homesteads on public lands, to prevent cruelty to animals in transit by railroads, &c ; in relation to additional bounties, the joint resolution to regulate the hours of labor for government workmen, &c., to amend the bankruptcy act, increasing all pensions 20 per cent., to charter the Cincinnati Southern Railway, to abolish the offices of Admiral and Vice Admiral

A SHOOTING AFFRAY. An assault and shooting affray occurred early Saturday morning on Merrimac St., Lowell Mass., near J. W. Purcell's Fireman' exchange saloon. Purcell on coming out met J. H. Barnard a member of the sporting fraternity, and Charles Carey, a recent graduate of the State Prison under an alias. Former differences led to words. Purcell alleges that Carey drew a knife and that he drew a revolver and shot Carey through the hand, and subsequently Barnard through the arm. The appearance of officer T. S. Sanborn and the arrest of the party put an end to the affair.

THE PRELIMINARIES OF PEACE.

The preliminaries of peace arranged by Bismarck and other Plenipotentiaries with Thiers and Favre, and subsequently ratified by the French Assembly, were as follows:

Article first specifies the line of demarcation

Article second provides that France will pay Germany five milliards of francs, one milliard at least in 1871, and all the rest in specie, three years from the ratification.

Article third provides that the evacuation is to commence on the ratification of the treaty by the Assembly; that the German troops will then immediately quit Paris and the left bank of the Seine also the departments of Cher, Indre, Loire and Seine Inferieure The French troops will remain behind the Loire until the signing of a definite treaty of peace, except those in Paris, where the government is not to have more than 40,000 men.

The Germans will evacuate the right bank of the Seine gradually after the signing of a definite treaty and the payment of half a milliard of francs. After the payment of two milliards of francs the Germans will only hold the departments of Marne, Ardennes, Meuse, Vosges Meurthe and Belfort After the payment of three milliards the Germans will only keep 50 000 troops in France, but if sufficient money guarantees be given the Germans will evacuate completely at once, otherwise three milliards will carry interest at five per cent from the ratification

Article four provides that the German troops make no further requisitions

Article five provides that the French government will find food for the army in occupation of the ceded departments, that favorable arrangements be made with the inhabitants, and time given them to move if they please, and no obstacle will be placed in the way of emigration

Art six provides that prisoners be immediately liberated on the ratification of the treaty and that the French railways will lend their carriages and engines at the same price as to the French government

Article seven provides that the treaty is to be definitely signed at Brussels, immediately after its ratification

Article eight provides that after the ratification the management of all the departments occupied will be handed over to the French officials subject to the German commanders and in interest of the German troops

Article nine provides that it be well understood that the Germans have no authority over the departments not occupied by them

A supplementary Convention follows Article first prolongs the armistice Article second provides for the occupation of Paris by 30 000 men and the separation of the French and German troops Article third provides that no more requisitions be made by the Germans and any made by mistake will be returned

Cheering Facts for the Billious
Every day demonstrates more clearly that liver complaint, in all its distressing forms, can be controlled and cured without difficulty or inconvenience. It is an obstinate disease, but its obstinacy is not proof against the per[illegible] remedial and restorative operation of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. That genial corrective compels the organ to do its duty. It must secrete regularly and healthfully under the influence of the Bitters. Their action brings it back from a state of rebellion into perfect harmony with the laws of health If there is costiveness, it disappears, if there is side-ache or back-ache, it ceases; if the skin and the whites of the eyes are tinged with superfluous bile, they recover their natural hue; if the appetite is gone, it returns; if the digestion is impaired, it is restored; in brief, whatever the symptoms of the complaint may be, and whatever the phase it has assumed, a cure is certain. PARLIAMENT

London March [illegible] In the House of Commons this evening Mr Drake gave notice of a resolution of regret that the government had assented to the holding of the Black Sea conference on the conditions dictated by Gortschakoff. A discussion took place upon the colonial policy of the government particularly as regards South Africa.

THE REEVES MURDER

MEMPHIS, Tenn, March 4

Nat. Ward, who recently killed Wm H Reeves, at Somerville, after being released on bail yesterday, was immediately arrested by the Deputy U S Marshal and again bailed on a charge of resisting the process of the U S Court. Sheriff Hester and several others, were also arrested on similar charges and gave bonds for their appearance. It appears that Ward has arrested several times on charges of intimidating negroes at the polls and gave bonds which J G Reeves, cousin of the deceased, Acting Marshal, refused to accept. Ward had denounced Reeves for his alleged persecution, which W. H. Reeves resented, and this led to his death. It is stated that W H. Reeves had been summoned by J G Reeves, Acting Marshal, to assist in arresting Ward on old charges and was in the discharge of his duty when killed.

POLITICAL.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 4.

The impeachment managers to-day reported to the House that they were unable to find any evidence on which to base articles of impeachment against Gov. Senate, and [illegible]

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS

FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

SENATE

Immediately after announcing the adjournment of the session of the 41st Congress, the Vice President said

The time fixed by law for the assembling of the first session of the 42d Congress having arrived the Secretary will call the roll of names of Senators-elect who will present themselves in front of the Vice President's chair to take the oath of office

In accordance with the invitation of the Vice President, the organization of the Senate was proceeded with

The following new Senators came forward and took the oath of office Messrs. Anthony, Caldwell, Cragin, Frelinghuysen, Hitchcock, Ferry, Kelley, Logan, Morrill Robertson, Stevenson, Saulsbury, Cooper, Wilson, Wright, Windom and West

The names of Senators-elect Alcorn of Mississippi and Clayton of Arkansas, were not called

The Vice President stated that the name of Mr Vance as Senator from North Carolina would not be called, as the legal and political disabilities of that gentleman had not been removed.

When the name of Mr Goldthwaite of Alabama was reached Mr Sherman objected to his being sworn in and asked to have read a memorial signed by forty five members of the Senate and House of Delegates of Alabama, protesting against that gentleman's admission

Mr Willard Saulsbury, whose Senatorial term had expired but who had not yet retired from his seat here addressed the chair and objected to the reception of the paper

Several Senators aside—The gentleman is no longer a member

Mr Saulsbury, bowing and retiring from his seat—Oh I forgot. (Great laughter)

The memorial was then read, setting forth that Mr Goldthwaite was not elected by a majority of the members of the Alabama Legislature as he only secured a majority of one in a total vote of 120 and several who voted for him had no legal right to vote In conclusion the memorial suggests an inquiry as to whether Mr Goldthwaite does not labor under legal and political disabilities

Mr Sherman moved to lay the credentials and memorial on the table until the organization of the Senate Committees, then to be referred to the Judiciary Committee

After some discussion the credentials were temporarily laid on the table

The Committees of notification to the President and House of the organization of the Senate were then appointed

The Vice President then laid before the Senate two sets of credentials from Texas, one representing that the late Senator Hamilton had been elected for the next term, and the other certifying to the election of General Joseph S Reynolds

Mr Flanagan moved that the oath of office be administered to Mr Hamilton

Mr Morton called for the reading by the Secretary of the joint resolution of the Texas Legislature giving the explanation of the case

The credentials were temporarily laid on the table.

The credentials of Foster Blodgett claiming a seat from Georgia, were presented, and Mr Hill called attention to the protest here recently presented from Republicans against Blodgett's admission

The papers were also temporarily tabled, and the Senate adjourned until 12 o'clock Tuesday

HOUSE

As the Speaker pronounced the last word of his address and stepped down from the dais to take his place on the floor as a member of the new Congress, a unanimous expression of approval and applause broke out in the chamber and galleries The clapping of hands was general and long sustained. After a short pause, Mr McPherson, the Clerk of the House summoned the new House to order and proceeded to call the names of the members by States The roll having been called 222 members answered to their names a full House consisting of 243 New Hampshire, Conn Texas and California are unrepresented the elections in those States not having been held The name of Rogers of N C was omitted at his own request, and that of Mr Boles of Arkansas was not called in consequence of an irregularity in his certificate of election Full delegations from Miss and Tenn were admitted though there is some informality in their credentials

James G Blaine was re elected Speaker with the usual formalities receiving 126 of 210 votes cast Geo W Morgan of Ohio receiving [illegible]

Mr Blaine was conducted to the chair by Messrs Poland of Vermont and Morgan of Ohio Calling the House to order, he said

Gentlemen, The Speakership of the American House of Representatives has always been esteemed an enviable honor A re election to the position carries a peculiar gratification in that it implies approval of past official bearing For this great mark of your confidence I can but return to you my sincerest thanks coupled with the assurance of my utmost devotion to the duties which you call upon me to discharge Chosen by a party representing the political majority of this House the Speaker owes faithful allegiance to the principles and policy of that party But he will fall far below the honorable requirements of his station if he fails to give to the minority its fullest rights under the rules which he is called upon to administer The successful working of our grand system of government, depends in a large measure on the vigilance of party organization and the most wholesome legislation which the House produces and perfects is that which results from opposing forces Mutually eager and watchful, and well nigh balanced in numbers, the Forty second Congress meets at a period of general content happiness and prosperity, throughout the land Under a wise administration and national Government, peace reigns in all our borders, and the only misunderstanding with any foreign government we may hope at this moment is in process of an honorable cordial and lasting adjustment We are fortunate at meeting at such a time, fortunate in representing such constituencies fortunate in legislating for such a country I trust gentlemen, our official intercourse may be free from personal asperity Believing that all our labors will eventuate in the public good and invoking the blessing of Him without whose aid and guidance we labor in vain, I am now ready to proceed with the further organization of the House, and as the first step thereto, I will, myself take the oath prescribed by the Constitution and laws." (General applause)

Mr Dawes of Mass the senior member of the House in continuous service, administered the oath to the Speaker The Speaker then proceeded to administer the oath to members, beginning with those from New England States

The members from other States were then sworn in in order, two members from Southern States taking the modified oath Mr Maynard of Tenn objected to swearing in Alfred W Waddell of North Carolina, as being disqualified from holding office Mr Kerr of Indiana objected to swearing in members from Tenn on the ground that the election law in Tenn had been repealed and they were elected without the sanction of law He presented a protest from citizens of Tennessee and explained that the Tennessee Legislature had by one sweeping measure repealed all acts of the previous Legislature including the election law Mr Bingham of Ohio, moved that the Tennessee members be sworn in and their credentials referred to Committee on elections which was agreed upon, and they were sworn in, three of them taking the test oath of 1862, and 5 the modified oath of 1868. Mr Kerr stated that the grounds of objection to the swearing in of the Mississippi members, was that their credentials presented no prima facie evidence of their right to a seat.

After long arguments against the admission of Mississippi members, by Kerr and Eldridge, Mr Bingham's motion that they be sworn in and their credentials be referred to Com on elections was agreed to, 110 to 71, this completed the organization of the House

The following persons were then elected and sworn in as officers of the House for the 42d Congress Edward McPherson, Clerk, N G, Ordway, Sergeant-at-arms, O. S. Buxton, Door-keeper, W. S. King Postmaster, G Butler, Chaplain. Office delegates from territories, seven in number, were then called and sworn in Hooper, Niblack and Scofield, were appointed to join the Senate Com. and inform the President that Congress was ready to proceed to business.

The concurrent resolution by Mr. Dawes, that the House adjourn sine die on Wednesday March 8, at 12 o'clock was agreed to, 147 to 17.

The case of Waddell of North Carolina, being called up. Mr. Maynard stated that Mr. Waddell held a judicial office, Clerk and master of Chancery before the war, and held a Lieutenant-Colonels commission in the rebel army. This becoming obnoxious to the third section of the 14th amendment, Mr. Kelley admitted that Waddell took the oath to support the Constitution, but denied that it was taken in connection with judicial office. He moved he be sworn in. The motion was agreed to, and the modified oath was administered to Waddell. The House then proceeded [illegible] The proceeding was attended with the task [illegible]

The [illegible] adjourned until Tuesday

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

The act relating to telegraphic communication although presented to the President in time, failed to receive approval for the reason it did not secure our citizens reciprocity in laying cables in foreign waters. It is certain he read the bill, but with held his signature

It is not certain that the Senate will concur in the House resolution to adjourn sine die on Wednesday Some of the Senators are disposed to remain in session until the San Domingo Commissioners make a report. The President said yesterday that he did not intend to send any message to Congress unless something should occur to render a formal communication necessary

THE DOMINION PARLIAMENT

OTTAWA, Can, March 4

In the Dominion Senate last night, Senator Mitchell moved for a second reading of the Fisheries bill, and explained that the measure was necessary to allow the officers engaged in seizing vessels to take them into the nearest port, also that one-half of the value be allowed to officers making such seizures The services performed by officers in this delicate duty was such as secures entire satisfaction to the Head of the Department. The alterations were not very important, but were required This fishery act had been commented on in high quarters in another country where it had been described as one of novel and arbitrary legislation It was neither novel nor arbitrary, as similar laws existed in England and the United States

Senator St Just thought the measure pregnant with danger and apt to lead to complications

Senator Mitchell said it was the duty of every Canadian patriot to strengthen the hands of the representatives in the Joint High Commission at Washington and particularly to avoid the expression of opinions which might endanger our rights. He concluded by moving that the House go into Committee of the Whole on Tuesday next to consider this bill

THE PROPOSED FIRE ALARM WHISTLE Mr Editor —I notice in your paper in the proceedings of our City Council, a proposal was received from the Muzzy Iron Works for furnishing a steam whistle for a fire alarm for the Fire Department, and that the same was referred to a Committee As the city have now in their employ in that Department, a Mechanical engineer, and one or more assistants on yearly salaries, and some of the time unemployed, it would seem to be not an economical arrangement, for the city to go outside of their employes, incurring additional expenses for the purposes intended by the proposal

If an alarm whistle is necessary, would it not be well to look about and see if some less expensive and more convenient way cannot be devised to obtain it. In the opening of the Hoosac tunnel in Massachusetts, the machinery that does the drilling is driven by compressed air, and the compressing is done by the power of a steam engine, some one or two miles away from the drill Now could not this principle be adopted in operating an alarm whistle ? and I would suggest the following method for it Have an iron tank capable of resisting an atmospheric pressure of three hundred pounds to the square inch, (which is three times the pressure carried by any steam boiler) and placed in the basement of the new steam fire engine house, or any other location near it, with a small air pump that could be attached or detatched at will, to the steam fire engine when they have steam on, and fill the tank or receiver with compressed air, which under ordinary circumstances would be sufficient to last for months. The air pump could at any time be worked by hand, when not convenient to take power from the engine. Taking into consideration that this method can be carried out without any extra cost to the city, except for the air receiver, whistle and air pump, and having it located where an alarm can be promptly given by day or night, it would seem advisable for the city, if they have got to pay for blowing the whistle, to [illegible] as possible and lessen our taxes. BANGOR PRODUCE MARKET

SATURDAY, March 4th, 1871

The following report is obtained by particular observation on the market, and the quotations are the prices paid for produce from the country teams this day, or about the average for the week past.

HAY—Loose hay comes in quite plenty and sells about the same as previously reported at from $24 to $25, and occasionally a load at $26 per ton for the best quality brought to market The inferior grades sell at from $18 to $20 and $23.

STRAW—Loose straw sells on an average of about $12 per ton, for a good article, and the entire range of market is about from $10 to $14

OATS are scarce and sell quick at 75 cents per bushel, and frequently an extra load sells a trifle higher

BARLEY is now worth on our market from 80 to 85 cents per bushel, for a good nice article

BEANS—Good clean yellow eyes have sold this week at $3,25 per bushel, and we quote them as selling dull at these figures Extra hand picked pea and blue pod beans are worth from $3 00 to $3,25 per bushel

BUTTER—We should quote good solid butter as selling from 30 to 32 and 35 cents per pound, and lump do , all the way from 30 to 35 and 38 cents for common to a good fair article, and what the butter dealers would call a right nice quality of lump, would bring from 40 to 42 cents. This latter quality is very scarce in the market.

EGGS have sold the past week at from 24 to 25 cents per dozen, and for the present week we predict the price to be about 23 cents per dozen, but it will depend somewhat upon the weather, and the disposition of the birds.

DRIED APPLES are coming in quite plenty, and good ones are selling on the market at from 8 to 9 cents per pound.

POTATOES are on the market only in small lots and sell at from 85 to 90 cents per bushel.

POULTRY—Turkeys are worth from 20 to 23 and 24 cents per pound, and chickens sell at from 18 to [illegible]

THE CENTRAL RAILROAD, OF IOWA,

have now built and equipped in first class manner about

which will complete the entire line with the exception of laying the track on twenty-five miles which is already graded They will thus open from north to south and by making a slight detour at one point they will give

THE FIRST THROUGH LINE ACROSS THE STATE

DIRECT COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ST LOUIS AND ST PAUL

This line of Railroad will have very special advantages for both local and through business besides such superior railroad connections as will secure to it a large portion of the carrying trade of the great Northwest The

First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds

which are issued upon this road are limited in amount to $16 000 per mile (while many roads issue from $20 000 to $40 000) and are offered at 90 and accrued interest in currency About two millions and a half of these bonds have already been disposed of leaving but a small balance unsold which are being rapidly taken

But I h[illegible] the woman above the saint,
[illegible] the light of the hearth is more to me
Than the shimmer of air built castle.

It fits as I grow to the landscape there—
[illegible] hardly feels as it stands aloof
Where the sandstone ends and the red slate roof
[illegible] the window low and square
That looks on the wild sea-water

From the top of the hill so green and high
There slopeth a level of golden moss
That bars of scarlet and amber cross
[illegible] rolling out to the further sky
[illegible] the world of wild sea water

Some starved grape vineyar ls round about
A zigzag road [illegible] ruts—
A little cluster of fishers' huts
[illegible] and [illegible] in and out
Twist the land and the wild sea water

Gray fragments of some border towers
[illegible] on a circling mound
With a furrow deeply worn all round
By the feet of children through the flowers
[illegible] the wild sea water

[illegible] the silvery break [illegible] day
Till the evening purple drops to the land
She sits with her cheek like the rose in her hand
And her sad and wistful eyes one way—
The way of the wild sea water

[illegible] the night till the yellow morn
Falls over the huts and the scallops of sand—
[illegible] like a torch in her hand—
She sits and maketh her moan so lorn
With the moan of the wild sea water

[illegible] for homely [illegible]
And never a [illegible] poet would paint
[illegible] the woman above the saint
[illegible] of the humblest hearth I prize

A New, Wonderful and Useful Invention,

CALLED A

Tical Power,

Has been discovered at the expense of many years study and experiment which will revolutionize the method of obtaining power for driving machinery of all kinds

Although his power is obtained from the rise and fall of the tides, machinery can be driven at a long distance from the seat of power with this invention, by means of a wire rope which is now in common use for similar purposes

This Machinery is so simple and occupies so little room that it can be erected on any wharf, and the expense of the Machinery very trifling compared to other power

It will run for years without any expense and without any person to tend it, the power being continuously obtained night and day if desired, a common scow being sufficient to drive light machinery

This power can easily and effectually be applied to ring Fog Bells, saving the Government thousands of dollars yearly, needing no attention after being once set in motion

The principle by which a continuous motion of the Main Shaft is insured in a given direction, can also be applied to Sewing Machines and prevent the possibility of the machine changing to the troublesome backward motion which breaks the thread, by using this process on Sewing Machines, both hands of the operator are entirely at liberty to hold the work. Children can run them without trouble

In manufacturing Sewing Machines for the future the Balance Wheels can be entirely dispensed with, consequently making a great saving in the manufacturing This principle can be applied to every machine at a trifling cost

The application of this principle can also be made to foot Lathes, the motion of the foot being hardly perceptible and more speed attained than with the crank. It also saves the motion of the body when propelling the machine and favors the ankle.

The "Close Treadle" for Sewing Machines, constructed to embody the above named principle and capable of being applied to sewing machines of any size, kind, or shape, are now being manufactured, and in a few days may be seen at the clothing store of E. C. Smart on Exchange Street in operation attached to a sewing machine from the manufactory of B. P. Howe, successor to the late A. B. Howe, the originator of the "Improved Howe Sewing Machine."

A license to manufacture and sell ten thousand of the "Close Treadle" having been granted to A. E. Kimball, agent for the "Improved Howe Sewing Machine," he will immediately introduce them in this market [illegible]
